eritage and Lineages

Lambeth Bible (England, second part of 12th century), which on 404 A folio depicts the Tree of Jesse, or the genealogy of Christ,

INTRODUCTION TO HERITAGE AND LINEAGES

The Heritage and Lineages chapter of this Compendium is a compilation of certain genealogical research specific to specific topics within the literary work of The Alchemic Kingdoms Series™. The compilation includes historical vital records such as birth and marriage certificates, death certificates and vital record indexes. It also includes Census records of that land mass and a record of an individual military draft card for the relevant character. However, the reader should not be surprised to see originally crafted genealogical trees rendered by the author. Even with yet to be discovered dates or locations of vital events, such as births, these ‘trees’ provide an organized and still detailed display for what the reader should understand. These explanations include spectral associations, biological lineages, in law relationships, and how they reflect in Peradāyah’s life. The reader could infer the spectral association between Prince Aleum’s beloved birth canal parent and Peradāyah not only based upon the Magic T Hexagon, but also her genealogy. The author has two primary originally styled displayed charting of heritage. The first is filled with colour and blanks, similar to a portion of a business organizational chart with coloured blocks and lines guiding the reader to the appropriate bloodlines of consanguinity. The other sort of charting of blood heritage has similar lines but the charting is horizontal, no blocks, but does have highlighting. These particular lineages the author used to demonstrate Peradāyah’s, Prince Aleum’s and Prince Aleum’s initial bonded mate’s heritage to one or more of the royal historical Houses of the kingdoms. Heritage and Lineages provided sufficient detail to make the reader understand that Peradāyah is a princess in her own right and destined as Prince Aleum’s sole and eternal bonded mate.

Llewelyn ap Owain/Owen (Rhys) (1270/1275, Gwynnoith Deheubarth, Wales-) married Lady Eleanor ap Rhys30 [Bar] (1280, Meuse, Argonne, Lorraine, France); daughter of Princess Eleanor31 [Plantagenet] and (m. #2 Henri Conte Bar). Princess Eleanor was the daughter of King Edward I (who is the son of King Henry III [1216-1292]...he had a half-brother (Richard I, Earl of Cornwall, King of Germany [1257-1272]). King Henry III was the son of King John [ruled 1199-1216] who was the son of King Henry II of the House of Plantagenet) and Queen Eleanor (whose m#2 to Llewelyn ap Gruffyd, Prince of Wales) daughter of King Ferdinand III, King of Castille and Joanna, Countess of Ponthieu. The foregoing is the pedigree of A 20 Owain ab Howel, son of Howel Da. and as will be noted, carries his genealogy back a very long time; in fact to Beli et Anna, and the same persons who are the first in pedigree.(X)

These pedigrees are of genuinely very ancient origin and in the opinion of eminent authorities, there is no reason at all to doubt their authenticity. Anna, the earliest of the line, is said to have been daughter of the Emperor of Rome. It is quite likely that the earlier portions of these pedigrees, however, are founded, at least partly, on tradition. "Map" means "son of."

These pedigrees are presented verbatim, as examples of the character of such documents, from Cymric sources.

OTHER KINGS AND PRINCES.

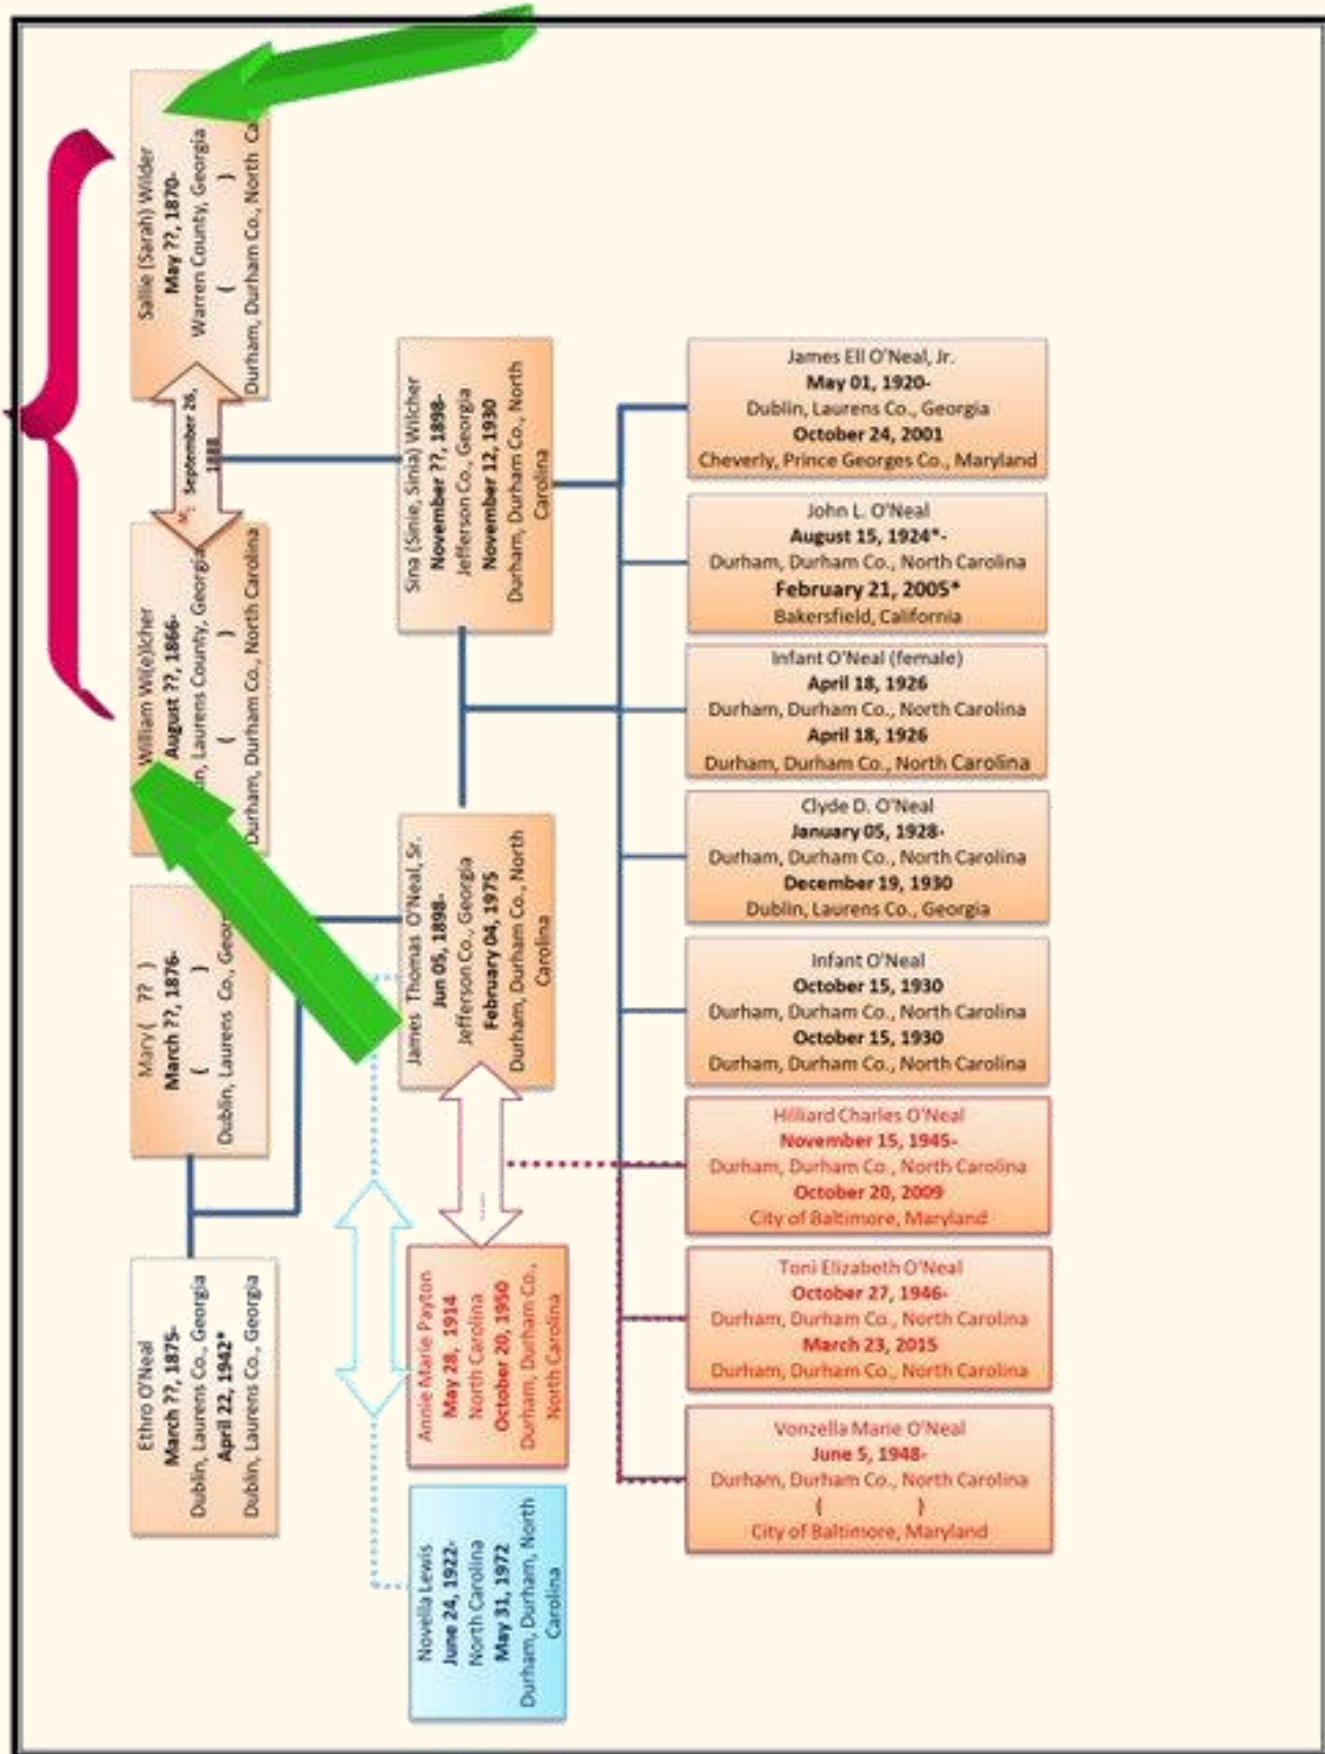

Probably Goidelic.

The above is a very ancient compilation and probably is a list of Goidelic Kings and Princes from Beli et Anna, to times contemporary with Cuneda and his more immediate descendants. It will be noted that Coyl hen (Coel Hen) (or Coel Godebog), the father of Cuneda's wife, has a place here. Dyfnwal Moelmud (Dumngual Moilmut) the Cymric law maker, before the time of Howel Da, is also named in the pedigree.

Other authorities state that Coel Hen (Coel Godebog) was a King of Britain.
